

Indigenous Public Health Training (IPH) Program

WHO ARE WE?

Indigenous Public Health Training (IPH)

Explore Canada's only Indigenous Public Health professional development opportunity at UBC's Faculty of Medicine.

The Indigenous Public Health Training Institutes equip Indigenous community members and scholars with the necessary skills to address public health issues in Indigenous communities. One-week intensive courses are offered toward the completion of the Graduate Certificate or Certificate (non-credit) in Indigenous Public Health, or courses can be taken individually.

APPLICATIONS ARE NOW OPEN

Important Information:

- Applications are now open!
- Application deadline: May 31st, 2024
- Scholarships are available
- IPH Summer week: August 19th - 23rd
 - Morning class: 8am - 12pm
 - Afternoon class: 12pm - 5pm
- Experience living on UBC Vancouver Campus!

Courses offered:

For Credit or Non-credit:

- SPPH 576 - Introduction to Indigenous Health Research Ethics (1.5 graduate level credits)
- SPPH 578 - Social Determinants of Indigenous Health (1.5 graduate level credits)

Got questions or unsure if this program is for you?  ceih.iph@ubc.ca

More information: <https://bit.ly/IPHCEIH>